The Giant's Causeway is a marvellous natural formation on the east coast of Ireland, in the neighbourhood of Portrush. It is composed of thousands of basaltic columns, found so closely together that they form a continuous series of rocks, and is divided into three tongues—the Middle, the Little, and the Grand Causeway.

 DEAR LIEBSTER.
 So glad to hear from you & that you are getting on so well. I am sure you have had a hard time of it since my time to brother I will write you today. I had to have something
 to put in the post
 when
 I
 was
 the
 city
 of London
 on
 the 10th
 the
 month
 the
 year 1871.
